DIVE and TRAVEL INSURANCE:

FWSA highly recommends that you purchase travel insurance. Make sure you understand the COVID coverage since it varies between insurance companies. READ the Fine Print!

Roatan Charters offers trip insurance on their website at: Trip Insurance – Roatan Charter . Additional travel insurance vendors can be found on FWSA website at: Far West Travel Insurance - Far West Ski Association \(fwsa.org\). Divers Alert Network (DAN) also offers travel insurance: Travel Insurance - Divers Alert Network \(dan.org\) .

In addition, all scuba divers will be required to have dive accident insurance through Divers Alert Network (DAN), the premier dive insurance. You can get their insurance info at <http://www.diversalertnetwork.org/>

ABOUT THE PHILIPPINES

Visas and Passports: US Passport holders will obtain a 30-day tourist visa on arrival at no extra costs. They may ask to see your confirmed return/onward flight ticket. Please make sure that your passport is valid for a least six months from the date of departure from the Philippines. Visa and passport regulations differ by country of origin. You must check the entry requirements and procedures if you have a non-US passport.

Currency & Payments: The Philippine Peso (PHP) is the official currency in the Philippines. Most businesses, shops and restaurants will accept credit and debit cards. Please note that in some cases, away from the major cities, you may be charged 3.5 – 6.0%. There are many ATMs in most cities and airports. You should ensure you have small denominations of Philippine Pesos for departure tax prior to departing Manila. There are also money changers at the airports. Incidental charges such as gift shop, tours and restaurant/bar can be charged to your room if a credit card has been provided. The resorts accepts Visa and MasterCard. Traveler's cheques are not accepted.

Airport Taxes & Fees: Passengers traveling within the Philippines are required to pay airport terminal fees. Please ensure you have a sufficient number of Philippine Pesos (PHP) to pay these fees on departure. It must be paid in cash only. There are ATMs and money exchanges in the airport. Domestic Departures are 200 PHP (approximately $4-$5/person USD depending on the daily exchange rate), and International Departures are 200 PHP (approximately $15 person USD depending on the daily exchange rate). Some airlines include the departure fees in the fare.

Climate and Weather: The Philippines is a tropical country, and the weather is fairly even all year round. The year is roughly divided into two seasons; “rainy” and “dry.” The rainy season generally begins in early June and can extend through November. The months of greatest rainfall are generally July and August. The dry season runs from November to May, but there is always the chance of light rainfall during this period. The warmest months are usually March through May, and the highest humidity is June, July, and August. Year round coastal and inland temperatures range from 81° F - 93° F with an average of 87° F. Evenings are marginally cooler.

Water Temperature and Exposure Suits: Water temperatures are broadly similar throughout the entire Philippines region with averages of 78° F - 82° F. Most guests will find a 3mm wetsuit and possibly just a rash guard suitable for the water temperature. You may even want to bring an extra vest or hood. I wore a 3mm full wetsuit for extra protection.

Electricity in Philippines is 220 volts AC, 50 cycles, using standard 2 prong Euro style plugs. Bring convertors for your electronic gear. Some locations may be 220 volts, 60 cycle, using standard US style plugs.

Philippines Standard Time: Time is UTC +8 hours or +15 hours from the West Coast USA.

Medications: Bring your prescription medications along with your own immunity meds such as Vit C, EmergenC, Airborne, Imodium, etc. Basic medications are available on the island, but it is best to bring what you need with you.

Insect repellent is recommended and is available for sale in the gift shop. We suggest bringing antihistamines to relieve itching you may experience from insect bites as it is much more effective than any topical cream.

Pack lightweight, comfortable clothing. Casual clothing is acceptable throughout the resort. Hats and sunscreen are recommended.

Batteries, especially watch and camera batteries, are expensive and difficult to find on the island. Remember your charger or bring spare batteries with you.

Puerto Galera

Puerto Galera was founded in 1574 as the original capital of Mindoro. The town was popularly known as “Puerto Galera” (Port of the Galleons). Spanish galleons coming from Mexico and Spain used the natural port to take refuge during stormy weather. The bay remains a refuge for ferries and other vessels during storms to this day.

Mindoro is the seventh-largest island in the Philippines. In past times it was called Ma-I or Mait by ancient Chinese traders and., as Mina de Oro (meaning gold mine) by the Spaniards. This is where the modern-day name came from. In 1942, the Japanese Air Force and Navy occupied the town. Mindoro’s Mount Halcon rises to 8,482 feet and is the 18th highest peak in the Philippines.

The water is certainly the main attraction of the island. Crystal clear and shimmering especially during the hot summer months, the sea framing Puerto Galera is ideal for swimming, sailing, surfing, snorkeling, and scuba diving. In fact, one does not have to go by boat to get to a dive site. Within a kilometer from the coast, schools of Moorish idols, trumpet fish, frog fish, lionfish, and leaf fish weave in and out of thriving corals and sea anemones while species of starfish – from the speckled red-and-white to the neon-blue Pacific – rest on the sandy floor.

Gradually sloping beaches – with the terrain ranging from powder white sand to grainy dark sand to smooth stones to rough coral rubble – comprise a large chunk of the island’s 25 thousand hectares. And while the Department of Tourism’s last count pegs the number of resorts at 115, pockets of isolated and virtually resort less coves and beaches are tucked between massive rock formations.

Puerto Galera is a tropical paradise that is both rustic and thriving. By day it echoes with the soft breeze and the pounding waves. At night, it comes to life with heady laughter and the clink of wine and glasses, only to segue once again to the barest whisper of the elements.

Another bonus for PG is that the topography of the coastline has sheltered areas where you can dive in most conditions. Very few diving days are lost due to bad weather each year. The Philippines has around twenty named storm systems each year. Not many affects Puerto Galera as they are more prone to affect the east coast of the Philippines.

The Puerto Galera diving area stretches from White Beach right around to Coral Cove. It is part of the Verde Island Passage and named by some scientists as the center of the world's marine biodiversity. There are over an estimated 3000 marine species including a hundred new species discovered within the last few years. In this area we have nearly fifty dive sites. The sites are an interesting mix of sloping reefs, Coral gardens deep pinnacles, shipwrecks, channel dives, muck diving, drift dives and sea grass beds. The range of depths means that the scuba diving is great for open water students right through to technical divers.

Due to the large tide difference especially around the full and new moons the drift diving can be an exhilarating experience. Canyon's is the best place to enjoy the ride. You can see schools of jacks, sweetlips, fusiliers, snappers, and batfish all feeding in the nutrient rich current. Occasional larger visitors like eagle rays, Spanish mackerel and great barracuda often cruise by. The second and third canyons are covered in amazing soft corals. These delicate corals offer a kaleidoscope of wonderful colors that will blow you away.

There are notable shipwrecks around Puerto Galera. The Alma Jane is the most popular; she was sunk in 2003 and lies in thirty meters of water. This wreck has a large school of Photogenic bat fish. You can penetrate this wreck easily as there is plenty of natural light to guide you through the cargo holds. The holds are full of Cardinal fish, you can see the male carrying its eggs in its mouth. Look out for the small air pockets in the ceiling of the holds as you can see Banded Sea snakes. There are some really nice soft corals growth on the outside of the vessel where you can see many shrimp and crab species.

There are three wrecks in Sabang Bay which are full of marine life like leaf scorpion fish, stone fish, and harlequin shrimps. Around the east side there are the remnants of a Japanese patrol boat from World War II. In Manila Channel you can find a wreck that is lying on its side and has some nice sponges and a resident frog fish.

There are some really spectacular muck dive sites in Puerto Galera bay. The most famous area is Giant Clams. It is not uncommon to see multiple Thorny seahorses, high on the most wanted list for divers are mimic octopus, flamboyant cuttlefish, blue ring octopus, hairy frogfish, ornate ghost pipe and mototi octopus. The other sites in the area are Shipyard and Montani. You can find some great bottom dwellers like the wonderpus, velvet ghost pipefish and pygmy cuttlefish. Another muck diving area is at White Beach, you can find bobtail squid, stargazer, and coconut octopus on this underrated dive site.

For fans of sharks there are a few dive sites where you have a chance to see them. The area around Kilima has been known for sightings of thresher sharks. Hibo reef is just a few minutes away from White Beach, this can be a tricky dive with strong currents, but you can see resident white tips sharks. For fans of whale sharks, you have a very small chance to see them around Puerto Galera. There are typically a few sightings each year.

If you are a fan of beautiful coral gardens then you will be impressed with the scuba diving in Puerto Galera. There are plenty of gently sloping reef dives which are full of color and life. We have barrel sponges that are six feet high that have taken hundreds of years to grow. You can see eight species of anemone fish. Sabang Bay has a sea grass area with resident green turtles. Fans of nudibranch will be happy to learn that we have over six hundred species. Another of the most famous but hard to spot favorites is the Pygmy seahorse, these tiny guys live on sea fans and can be found on a number of dive sites around PG.

You can have all this fun in Puerto Galera without even visiting the main diving attraction, which is Verde Island. It is hard to put into words just how good it is. There is a wall of fish that makes it hard to see the reef. I would say it has the most fish per square inch than any other dive site in the whole of the Philippines.

Anilao

Anilao is a quiet barangay on the northern coast of Mabini, a peninsula-municipality that separates Balayan Bay from Batangas Bay. Yep, it is just a barangay. But Anilao's popularity prompted resorts in neighboring villages to market themselves as also part of Anilao. These days, as far as tourism is concerned, Anilao is almost synonymous with the whole Mabini municipality.

Thanks to its proximity to Manila (only 3 hours away), it has become an ideal destination for divers, especially for beginners who may be a bit hesitant to travel to the far corners of the country for a first dip. The hidden wonders it keeps in its depths are no longer secret, but they continue to amaze curious souls.

Anilao is best known as a diving destination. While Tubbataha Reef is widely considered the Philippines' Diving Mecca, many regard Anilao as an "Eden," the birthplace of scuba diving in the country. But Anilao is more than the treasure-trove it keeps beneath the waves. Its shores are mostly rocky, but in between some of the promontories are small pockets of white and beige sand for the picky beach bum. It is also the gateway to the islands of Tingloy, which have been gaining a lot of attention over the past few years.

Anilao's main draw is its 20+ dive sites. It faces Balayan Bay, which is part of the Verde Island Passage, the center of center of the world's marine biodiversity according to a 2007 Smithsonian Institute study. Anilao is world famous for its exceedingly rare critters but has even much more to offer for enthusiastic divers. A sunken floating casino, very colorful and healthy reefs, many different kinds of corals in a stunning underwater landscape.

Marine Life includes more than 600 different kinds of nudibranchs, pigmy seahorses, anthias, gobies, frogfishes, rare shrimps, and crabs. 5 types of octopuses including blue ring. Flamboyant cuttlefish, jacks, turtles, triggerfishes, cardinals, fusiliers, damsels, giant clams, clown fishes, groupers, mandarin fishes, moray eels including the blue ribbon. Fish include barracudas, idols, parrotfish, batfish, snakes, scorpionfish, stonefish, lionfish, rhinopias, ghost pipefish, leaf, squids, cuttlefish, pufferfish, crinoids, sweetlips and much more.

For those who like bigger animals you will find that Anilao has no shortage of sharks, rays, and other good-sized schooling fish like trivially barracuda. It is also possible to spot the occasional whale shark or other bigger animals while diving. These can be found at the more advanced sites with good currents and some deeper reefs. In turn, those who prefer nice easy diving and colorful soft and hard corals will be fully satisfied in Anilao.

Located right in the middle of the coral triangle, Anilao boasts of some of the widest diversity of coral life that can be found on a dive. Good-sized hard corals such as brain, table and staghorn corals are on almost every dive, mixed with an array of soft corals, large sponges, and gorgonian fans.

Secret Bay, also known as Manit Muck, is probably the best muck dive site in Anilao. Here, you can find mimic octopus, wonderpus, pipefish, frogfish, and the list goes on. Do not forget to dive Manit at night to see this wonderful site come to life.

The Pier, along with Secret Bay, is among the highly requested dive sites during their annual macro photography workshops in Anilao. You can find the much-sought-after bobbit worms and stargazers! Twin Rocks is great for macro and wide-angle alike, with pristine soft corals, schooling jacks, and plenty of small fish. Beatrice is a great wide-angle site with colorful corals teeming with anthias and other reef fish.

Mt. Gulugod Baboy literally means “pig’s spine” because of its appearance. It is a range of three hills (Pinagbanderahan, Gitna, and Gulugod Baboy at 1,722 feet above sea level) that runs across the Calumpang peninsula. A great 2 – 4-hour hike. From its summit, you can have a good view of Balayan Bay, Maricaban Islands, and, on a clear day, Verde Island and Mindoro. The trek starts at Philpan Dive Resort.

Sombrero Island is easily accessible from Anilao. You can even see it from some resorts. It is a hat-shaped rocky island surrounded by nice, glittering white sand. You can visit it as part of an island-hopping tour. Just arrange a boat tour at your resort or at Anilao port and tell the boatman to make a stop at Sombrero Island. You can also visit Sepoc Beach on the same tour.
